SOLIDARITY WITH GITXAAŁA

Gitxaala's legal case will no longer allow corporations to stake mining claims in Indigenous territory without consultation with First Nations in B.C. Now, Gitxaala Nation is asking the courts to uphold Free, Prior, and Informed consent.

RAVEN

In December 2025, Gitxaala Nation received a decision from the BC Court of Appeal that section 3 of B.C.'s Declaration on the Rights of Indigenous Peoples Act (DRIPA) is now legally enforceable, effective immediately. This means the Province now needs to consult and cooperate with Indigenous Peoples to make all laws consistent with DRIPA. However, instead of upholding their own legislation, the B.C. government has committed to amending DRIPA and has been granted leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada over the BC Court of Appeal's decision. Support Gitxaala Nation as they push the courts to uphold Free, Prior, and Informed Consent!
